ATTORNEYS AT LAW

PRACTICE AREA

Doctors, Nurses and Hospitals

Although the frequency of litigated claims against medical professionals has generally declined in recent years, payouts for successful medical professional liability claims have increased. As hospitals and clinics employ more healthcare professionals, there's a higher malpractice risk from provider-led services.

In addition to the traditional exposures faced by physicians, nurses and other healthcare providers, changing employment patterns, decreasing reimbursements and greater regulatory scrutiny are among the increasing challenges that lawyers representing healthcare professionals must manage. Tackling these challenges is part of our commitment to the healthcare community, a commitment that has spanned more than five decades.

Our attorneys have been trained to vigorously defend healthcare professional liability claims, and we remain devoted to defending and trying these cases when circumstances require.
